BREAKFAST AT THE HOTEL

The Matis Indians will travel by canoe for 4 days until they reach the Heliconia Reserve. In the jungle the Matis Indians will make a camp where you will spend the next 4 days with them to see them in their activities and interact with them. Activities with the Indians Jungle Hike and Blowgun Hunting The Indians use long blowguns for hunting. Traps and fishing Matis In the jungle traps are placed to hunt mammals and to protect the camp from human invaders Fishing is done with bow and arrows and with the Barbasco toxic plant for fish Medicinal plants Search in the jungle for medicinal plants that the indigenous people use. Buchute, Hormiga and Curare Going out to the jungle to look for a plant called Buchute in the dialect of the indigenous people. This plant is used by them to dilate the pupils and thus see better when hunting. You have to remove the roots of the tree and scrape its bark, then mix it with water and apply a few drops. The drops cause pain and burning. It is not easy to find this plant The Curare is a vine. The rind must be removed and boiled in water for several hours. The mace is then used in the darts of the blowguns to be able to hunt monkeys and birds. Tachiua ants are brave and warlike. The activity consists of looking for a nest and putting your hands. Only a few of you manage to endure the pain. Huito Temporary Tattoos and Permanent Tattoos The temporary tattoo is made of the fruit called huito. The fruit is scraped and the liquid is used to paint the body. Tattoo duration up to 10 days. For the fixed tattoo you have to get the Copal tree resin in the jungle. The Tisne is extracted and then with thorns from the Chontaduro tree the skin is pierced. History Matis At night he sits down to listen to the history of the indigenous people. They drink a liquid extracted from a vine called Tachit. This plant gives them good energy and inspires them for stories. The first sip of liquid is bitter, the third is already sweet. Artisanal work with clay With clay found in the jungle, masks and tableware are prepared. Kampoo Frog Ritual At night you have to look for the poison dart frog that lives in the trees. The poison must be extracted from the frog. The skin is then burned with a vine and the poison is placed on the burned skin. The reaction causes chills, vomiting, dizziness, and tachycardia. The indigenous people use it as an initiation ritual to be good hunters. Mariwin Ritual: An adult puts on a mask, paints himself with charcoal and ties with fern leaves. They whip themselves with the bush that produce pain. This ritual is to remove laziness and have the courage to work.
